That being the case, it is obvious that they cannot debate before American audiences questions that are of domestic concern in the United States, since their government would not consider for a moment taking any official action to participate in such a debate.

governmental views on pending legislaion of any character in this country is held to the State Department, which will transmit such views to the proper legislative body. As a result of the criticism expressed in the Senate of Ambassador Ricci's action and also of the conversations between Secretary Hughes and the ambassador, which grew out of that criticism, it is regarded as wholly improbable that any future remarks of the ambassador would be of such a nature as to revive the incident now closed with complete iriendliness on all sides.

PRESIDENT EULOGIZES GENIUS OF WASHINGTON

Pays Glowing Tribute to Heroism of Continental Army as Battle Monument Is Unveiled at Princeton.

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 9.—Presi- heart." dent Harding reached here today at p.m. to dedicate the Princeton Battle Monument, after traveling across country by motor from Somerville, N. J., with his party.

Behind a squadron of cavalry and over a road flanked by artillery delivering the twenty-one-gun presilivering the twenty-one-gun presidential salute, the President was taken directly to the monument speaking stand.

Bayard Stockton, 3d, a descendant of a Declaration of Independence signer, pulled away a great flag, which draped the MacMonnies sculpture commemorating George Washington's exploits in leading the Continental Army in the Princeton-Trenton campaign against the British. There were other brief preliminaries in the dedication ceremony.

At their conclusion President Harding swung straight into his address, an appreciation of the genius of Washington, which, he said, "here reached the highest of its brilliancy in action." A quiet throng, in the open air on the Princeton Inngrounds, heard the President's words. Departing from his set speech the today," he said. Careful examination of the printed code reveals the fact that all speeches by American diplomatic officers are absoluely forbidden, except on "extraordinary festal occasions," and the inference is that the American diplomats will even then confine their remarks to comments on the beauties of nature and the wonderful opportunity that nations have nowadays to further the brotherhood of man.

Bill Referred to Subcommittee. Bus Line. The Jones' resolution providing for an investigation of the fiscal affairs of the District by a joint congresmittee today authorized this, uranimously indorsing the proposed investigation, the concurrent resolution having been reported to the House by the rules committee. Representative Frank C. Milspaugh of Missouri voiced the opinion of the committee that this investigation was of urgent importance and would settle a long drawn out controversy.

Sets Aside Decision This decision to call up the Jones' resolution in no way sets aside the previous decision of the committee making the Fitzgerald bill for compulsory industrial insurance the order for special business. If Chairman Focht finds the attitude of the House is such that the resolution for investigation of the fiscal situation can be passed promptly it will be called up before the Fitzgerald bill. Expected opposition to the workmen's compensation bill from Chairman Focht was dissipated today when Mr. Focht made it plain that he is strongly in favor of such legislation and a pioneer advocate.

Special Dispatch to The Star.
PORTLAND, Me., June 9.—A modernized version of "Mary's Little Lamb," with a sedate, elderly setter substituted in the place of the lamb, was enacted here when the Waynefleet School, a fashionable prepara-tory institution, conferred diplomas upon ten young women anl also graduated one dignified canine. The dog, Troubles, is the property

Ever since she entered Waynefleet. Trouble has gone back and forth to school with his young mistress. So well behaved has he been that he frequently has been allowed a seat alongside her in the classroom. Long ago he was adopted as the class mascot. When the preparations for the graduation were begun the class was heartbroken because Troubles could not share in the festivities. Finally the principals of the school consented to him taking part. Thursday Troubles solemnly was put through his paces, rehearsed with the graduates, marched with them, sat at the feet of his mistress and generally acquitted himself in a creditable manner.

When the graduation itself took place, Troubles, the picture of dignity, entered with the graduating class. He occupied the place assigned to him on the platform, bowed his head reverently upon his paws during the invocation and later for the benediction, scrambled to his feet and stood with head erect while the singing was in progress, registered profound attention while his young mistress read her essay, and otherwise played his canine part with distinct poise.
